

Necklace in bone spindle whorl beads

Item number :9150

Description :

“ A spindle whorl is a disc or spherical object fitted onto the spindle to increase and maintain the speed of the spin. For ages the whorls have been made of many different materials: amber, antler, bone, coral, glass, metal (iron, lead, lead alloy), and wood (oak). Some types of local materials have been also used, such as chalk, limestone, mudstone, sandstone, slate, and soapstone.” source Wikipedia

- Origin : Iran
- Date :
 - 15th Century
 - 17th Century
- Width (cm): 45
- Material: Tainted bone
- Condition report: Restrung with new gold lock.
- Detailed description, inscriptions, signatures, stamps, marks: “ A spindle whorl is a disc or spherical object fitted onto the spindle to increase and maintain the speed of the spin. For ages the whorls have been made of many different materials: amber, antler, bone, coral, glass, metal (iron, lead, lead alloy), and wood (oak). Some types of local materials have been also used, such as chalk, limestone, mudstone, sandstone, slate, and soapstone.” source Wikipedia

Contact us for more information : info@weart.com